Assignment 5

The feedback code for submitting this assignment has passed. As per our records you have not submitted the assignment.

1. Write the following letters (L, R, H, W) with the correct answer (A, B, C, D).

2. Describe the main types of sensory perception.

3. Make a discrimination test for determining whether there is a difference in taste.

4. Define the term "attention" and its importance in everyday life.

5. Explain the concept of "attention deficit hyperactivity disorder" (ADHD).

6. Describe the stages of the attention cycle.

7. Identify the different types of attention and their functions.

8. Summarize the relationship between attention and memory.

9. Discuss the role of attention in decision-making processes.

10. Evaluate the impact of technology on attention span.

No. the answer is incorrect. Format: 6.

Accepted Answers:

E. D. B. A. B. A.

A: A condition known as _______ in which damage to _______ affects the ability to recognize faces visually.

B: The process by which the brain organizes visual information into meaningful patterns.

C: A type of attention disorder characterized by difficulties in sustaining attention and hyperactivity.

D: The ability to focus on a single task while ignoring distractions.

E: The initial stage of attention, where stimuli are filtered and selected for further processing.

No. the answer is incorrect. Format: 6.

Accepted Answers:

D. B. A. B. A.

A: Pathway for object identification is from _______ and the pathway for object location is from _______.

B: Occipital to temporal lobe, Occipital to Parietal lobe, Occipital to Parietal lobe, Occipital to temporal lobe, Occipital to parietal lobe.

C: The process by which the brain organizes visual information into meaningful patterns.

D: The ability to focus on a single task while ignoring distractions.

E: The initial stage of attention, where stimuli are filtered and selected for further processing.

No. the answer is incorrect. Format: 6.

Accepted Answers:

B. D. A. B. A.

A: According to the major theory of speech perception, _______ articulates how to move.

B: The auditory theory of speech perception.

C: The role of context in speech perception.

D: The ability to focus on a single task while ignoring distractions.

E: The initial stage of attention, where stimuli are filtered and selected for further processing.

No. the answer is incorrect. Format: 6.

Accepted Answers:

A. D. B. A. B. A.

A: The general auditory theory of speech perception posits that our ability to perceive words is based on a fundamental property of auditory perception, which is _______.

B: Two different perceptions.

C: The role of context in speech perception.

D: The ability to focus on a single task while ignoring distractions.

E: The initial stage of attention, where stimuli are filtered and selected for further processing.

No. the answer is incorrect. Format: 6.

Accepted Answers:

D. A. B. A. B. A.

A: The process of shifting attention from one place to another by moving eyes to those specific objects or locations is known as _______.

B: The role of context in speech perception.

C: The ability to focus on a single task while ignoring distractions.

D: The ability to maintain attention on a task.

E: The initial stage of attention, where stimuli are filtered and selected for further processing.

No. the answer is incorrect. Format: 6.

Accepted Answers:

B. D. A. B. A. B. A.

A: Evaluation of sensory inputs and adaptation to new sensory stimuli.

B: The role of context in speech perception.

C: The ability to focus on a single task while ignoring distractions.

D: The ability to maintain attention on a task.

E: The initial stage of attention, where stimuli are filtered and selected for further processing.