Assignment 8

Due on: 2020-02-10, 23:59 HKT

Unit 1 - Week 8

Course outline

Week 1

1. Introduction to management

Week 2

2. The environment and its relation to a capital investment project is expected to change rapidly.

Week 3

3. You are considering a project that will result in a significant increase in raw materials inventory. The expected life of the project is seven years. The net cash flow is expected to begin at the end of the first year and continue for six years. The salvage value at the end of the seventh year is estimated to be $15,000. The required rate of return is 10%.

Week 4

4. You are considering a project that will result in a significant increase in raw materials inventory. The expected life of the project is seven years. The net cash flow is expected to begin at the end of the first year and continue for six years. The salvage value at the end of the seventh year is estimated to be $15,000. The required rate of return is 10%.

Week 5

5. You are considering a project that will result in a significant increase in raw materials inventory. The expected life of the project is seven years. The net cash flow is expected to begin at the end of the first year and continue for six years. The salvage value at the end of the seventh year is estimated to be $15,000. The required rate of return is 10%.

Week 6

6. You are considering a project that will result in a significant increase in raw materials inventory. The expected life of the project is seven years. The net cash flow is expected to begin at the end of the first year and continue for six years. The salvage value at the end of the seventh year is estimated to be $15,000. The required rate of return is 10%.

Week 7

7. You are considering a project that will result in a significant increase in raw materials inventory. The expected life of the project is seven years. The net cash flow is expected to begin at the end of the first year and continue for six years. The salvage value at the end of the seventh year is estimated to be $15,000. The required rate of return is 10%.